WILSON (EDWARD THOMAS) 1832-1918.

7633. In English, on paper: written by E. T. Wilson, 1914-16: $8\frac{1}{8} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ in., xii + 50 leaves.

Autograph record of the medical history of Dr. Edward Thomas Wilson, of Cheltenham, with details of his symptoms (fibrositis) from May 1913 to 26 Apr., 1916. Foll. i-xi, 40-1, 43-50 are blank.

A supplementary note by Sir W. Osler is on fol. 42, and, on fol. xii, an obituary (Lancet, 1918, i, p. 656) and the following note, dated 27 July, 1918:

Remarkable case, remarkable record, and a remarkable old man; a fine type of the English naturalist-physician and of the cultivated provincial consultant. I first met him at the B.M.A. meeting at Cheltenham, when I was his guest. The loss of his son with Scott was a sad blow. The case itself is a very unusual one—a fibrositis, with nodules, chiefly of the adductor muscles. William Osler.

RECORD

Case of.
Edward T. Wilson Westal

EDWARD THOMAS WILSON, B.A., M.B. OXFORD,
 F.R.C.P. LOND., 1916

CONSULTING PHYSICIAN TO THE CHELTENHAM GENERAL HOSPITAL.

Dr. E. T. Wilson, who died on April 19th, aged 85, was a prominent citizen of Cheltenham, a thoroughly learned man of science, and an original authority on all public health questions since these questions began to bulk largely in the affairs of all communities. He had suffered severely from the death of his distinguished and gallant son, Dr. E. A. Wilson, chief of the scientific staff of Captain Scott's expedition to the South Pole in 1910, and in the last years of his life he remained under this sad influence.

Lancet, 1918, i, 656

Born in Liverpool in 1832, Edward Thomas Wilson was the son of Edward Wilson, of Hean Castle, Pembrokeshire, his brother being Sir Charles Wilson, R.E., who commanded the Gordon Relief Expedition in 1885. He was educated at Oxford, where he graduated B.A. in 1855, with a first class in natural science. He studied medicine at St. George's Hospital, and later in Paris, and in 1859, having by this time graduated in medicine, he accepted an appointment on the medical staff of a branch dispensary of the Cheltenham General Hospital. He became physician to the main institution in 1875, a position which he held for 31 years, at the close of which lengthy period of service he was appointed consulting physician. In 1870 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians of London, his scientific attainments being generally recognised, but deeply attached as he was to the town in which he lived, he refused all calls to other spheres of professional work for which his training eminently fitted him. One such post, placed absolutely at his disposal, may be mentioned—the chair of hygiene in University College, London. He was recognised in Gloucestershire as a prominent consultant, being also physician to the Winchcombe Cottage Hospital and Cotswold Convalescent Home, to Cheltenham College, and to the Cheltenham Ladies' College. But it is as a sanitarian that his claim to recollection is particular. In the cause of sanitary science he was unwearied in his labours. He took a prominent part in establishing the Delancey local Hospital for Infectious Diseases, he was an early supporter of the Society of Medical Officers of Health, he founded a district nursing association, and as a contributor to professional journals he wrote largely on infectious diseases and public health statistics. In 1884, a year in which London was visited by a severe small-pox epidemic, he contributed a series of articles to THE LANCET on the influence of small-pox hospitals and the possibility of widespread aerial convection which are worth reading to-day. Dr. Wilson did not establish his points, and much of what he wrote deals with questions which are still in doubt, but the clearness of his arguments and the courtesy of his contentiousness remain models. An enthusiastic naturalist, he was president of the Cheltenham Science Society, and in his eighty-first year he spent the summer in the Cotswold Hills hunting for neolithic flint instruments.

Remarkable case, remarkable record & a remarkable old man. A fine type of the English naturalist physician and of the cultivated provincial consultant.
I first met him at the B.M.A. meeting at Chatterham when I was his guest.
The loss of his son with 1st was a sad blow.

The case itself is a very unusual one - a fibrosis, with nodules, chiefly of the extensor muscles.

T. 99. Early sleep in interrupted by man's cough very hoarse in throat.

1872 weak heart? For some years I suffered from intense occipital & basal headaches for which I often had to go to bed - Sleep invariably cured it. When milder I drove in the brougham with a hot bottle to the nape of the neck (an aunt had them in middle ^{life} life). My heart was often irregular & was out of order - The headaches eventually disappeared & rarely if ever returned after my 50th year.

1874 Constipation For the Constipation Dr J. Addington Symonds ordered an aloetic dinner pill which I have taken daily with advantage for 40 years.
Heart troublesome. For the Heart I consulted Dr J. Ogle who found a to & fro murmur. He sent me to Dr Walsh who shook his head, looked grave & told me not to bathe. Went to Dr Fuller who made light of it all after which I went to Guernsey - bathed & walked daily & returned perfectly well.

1883 Lobular pneumonia(?) My first serious illness. While near the close of a May 29. Series of Lectures on Hygiene at the L. College - I suddenly developed a temp of 104 & began expectorating pus & blood. There was also a sharp attack of Herpes Labialis. It was diagnosed first by Dr E. Long Fox & subsequently by Dr J. Ogle (Dr Surge) as Lobular pneumonia, tho' it was never absolutely located. (It might have been a tubercular gland but Bailli were as yet unknown) I was very weak but all went well & on May 29 I went to Weymouth - & by July 2 was sufficiently recovered to walk down to Portland Bill.

1884 Melena (i) ap. Distinct symptoms of melena without other illness - lasted for short time only. no obvious cause 1887 melena (ii) 7eb. as in 1884. Was in full work. no other symptom.

1892 Lumbago & liver derangement dyspepsia. Violent attack of lumbago - with Liver disturbance Pains in left shoulder. Flatus (Sulph. Hydrogen) Intermittent pulse. Took holiday in Yorkshire - weather cold - Symptoms gradually improved. Could walk uphill while a long walk on the flat increased the dyspepsia.

Occasional attacks of lumbago for some years - never omitted my cold bath. Remed. Hyd. not a purge.

Sputum ever since 1883 attack liable to get grey & very tenacious in damp weather.

1894 Dyspepsia (?) After a hurried meal & a short walk. violent distension & flatulence ensued. Intense distress of heart & breathing. Like a cricket ball pressing under the right ribs. no sickness, no diarrhea; Buckell injected 1/2 gr Morph. with speedy relief.
next day bowels were tender at a limited spot over the gall bladder - & this continued for some days. There was no severe pain suggesting passage of gall stone.

1895 Influenza (i) Many having passed, unscathed, through several epidemics of Influenza, I, in company with several who had done the same, succumbed to the disease with Laryngeal complications. Quick recovery.

1895 Backache
melana (iii)

~~Having spent through some domestic troubles~~ In Aug went to Newin & there had rather a prolonged attack of melana (black to slate) with a pain across the back about the level of the liver which came & went but did not interfere with exercise.

When shooting in Sep. it ^{pain} grew so bad after walking over rough ground that I had to lie ^{flat} on my back for half a minute - I could then go on for another shell.

No sickness. no diarrh. pain not severe enough for gall stone. Subsided by degrees - not to return till 1900.

1900 Backache.
1901 Liver

Severe at times but not preventing work - lasted into 1901. Liver sluggish with frequent light motions

1903 Influenza (ii)
Headache & coryza.

Slight attack. Quick recovery.

1904 Cumbago May 29. very sharp attack

1905 Influenza (iii) Feb 26 Slight attack & quick recovery.
Tracheal

1906 Influenza (iv) sudden attack in middle of the night. Limited crepitations Pneumonia Jan 7 left base. Out again Jan 30. Subnormal temp for some days. Soft nasal catarrh & sticky sputum persistent for some time. Larynx very sensitive.

1909 Ptomaine poison. Dec 29 After eating game pie (?) was seized with queer lateral waving of the eyes ^{with} a dizzy feeling. At the same time there was a dragging back of the head almost opisthotonic. Could not get up stairs without help. Sick up. Diarrhea - all passed off after sleep.

1910 Ptomaine poison (ij) Apparently after German Sausage - same symptoms. Soon recovered.

1911 Ptomaine (iii) 1 1/2 hours after a rich Omelette at breakfast - objects began to sway in a wavy manner. with the same opisthotonic tendency of head & back. Sickness. A sore aching feeling was felt for some days at the back of the head. & eyes were weak & sore. all soon passed off. ~~and then~~

1912 Influenza (V) slight with Relapse. Feb. 1. Very slight - but severe relapse. recovery after 3 weeks.
Laryngeal

Ptomaine Poison (ix) after eating some black bread had the same feeling as in the previous attacks but slighter. Felt queer as if he not sick. Soon passed off & have not returned since (1914) Eye centres affected in each attack.

1913 Cramp (muscular) Having been subject for some time to occasional attacks of Cramp in the legs at night, I was Jan 29. seized with the most excruciating spasm, apparently of a single muscle on the outside of the right thigh. It
